

Anthropological Forum

Submit Your Research

Anthropological Forum is a journal of social anthropology and comparative sociology that specialises in Australia, Southeast Asia and the Pacific. The editors are currently inviting submissions, including those reflecting new approaches based on ethnographic and theoretical work in the regions highlighted above. We also welcome theoretically oriented papers of a more general nature.

Founded in 1963, Anthropological Forum has a distinguished publication history. The journal aims to provide a forum for both established and innovative approaches to anthropological research. It includes a special section, Applied Forum, a periodic feature that is devoted to contributions on applied anthropology and is aimed at fostering lively debate on issues of contemporary relevance. Anthropological Forum also aims to publish one guest-edited thematic special issue each year, which is typically drawn from a conference session on a contemporary topic of interest.

Anthropological Forum is listed in the Anthropology category of the Thomson Reuters Journal Citation Reports
